Birth – Life – Death – Eternity

Several years ago a popular television program began with the words, “Birth, Life, Death, Eternity.” In reality, to borrow another theme, “these are the days of our lives.” How do you measure your life? These words explain the dimensions of time, but they don’t explain the quality of our existence. Why are we here?

Birth. All of us begin our journey in the same way. Usually, it is a happy moment, filled with celebration, anticipation, and hope. We enter the world pure and clean. No stains from sin; no disappointments or failures. The future looks promising.

Life. The distance between birth and death is measured by the “dash”. Scripture describes the journey as “a vapor that appears for a little while and then vanishes away.” It is like grass that “withers and then passes away.” At the front end it seems so long. At the back end it seems so short.

Death. Shakespeare described life as a city with many strange streets and death as the marketplace where they all meet. A common experience for all of us, death is an inevitable appointment we must keep (Hebrews 9:27). Is it the end, or the beginning?

Eternity. Without time to define it, how can we comprehend it? Infinity. Forever. Never-ending. From “everlasting to everlasting.” Only God can conceive of the vastness of it all. Life without end. Eternal life. The promise to all who serve the “Father of Eternity.”

Our lives have a beginning but no end. Death is a transition into eternity where we face the ultimate results of our choices in life. “It is appointed to man once to die, then comes the judgment” (Hebrews 9:27). Scripture tells us further, “Blessed (happy) are the dead who die in the Lord... that they may rest from their labors, for their works follow them” (Revelation 14:13). A “crown of life” awaits the faithful believers. It will be worth the journey.
